The Experience

Originally built in Kyoto in the early Edo period as a villa for Prince Ichijo Ekkan, this residence was later relocated to Kamakura along with its Karesansui (dry landscape) garden. It is now designated as an Important Cultural Property of Japan. Comparable to Kyoto's Katsura and Shugakuin Imperial Villas, the building reflects the refined culture of the imperial court. Beneath its rustic exterior, finely crafted details, natural materials and modern cedar-door paintings reveal an elegant and sophisticated Imperial aesthetic.

Unique Venue Selling Points

Surrounding the villa are modern Sukiya-style buildings and a strolling Japanese garden featuring moss, stone arrangements, and seasonal trees such as maples and pines—offering one of Kamakura's finest settings to experience the beauty of Japan's four seasons. An optional tea ceremony experience, enjoyed to the sounds of a flowing stream and birdsong, is especially popular during the peak tourist seasons.
